Credit Means Debt

Much is being heard these days in criticism of Governments and banks, and proposals of many kinds are advanced having as their object the "reform" of the banking system, the "curtailment" of the powers of banks, the "socialization" and the "nationalization" of banking, money and credit; the gold standard is attacked on the one hand and defended on the other; inflation is advocated; "inflation" is urged by many, while others argue that present inflation means ultimate "deflation" and future trouble. Drastic writing down of present indebtedness, even complete wiping out of debt, is demanded in some quarters, which others claim is a policy of "repudiation" and the destruction of future credit.

Present criticism of the banks rests primarily in the fact that, at the present time, the banks will not extend credit. If people today could go to their bank and borrow as readily and as largely as they could and did in 1928 and 1929, much of the criticism now heard of the banks would die. It is because they cannot borrow, and in thousands of cases have no employment and so cannot earn, while in the case of farmers, prices are so low that there is less return than profit on their production, that people, already in debt, are bitterly critical of the banks.

Critical over what? Because the banks will not extend credit to them. In other words, the banks will not allow these people to get further into debt to them. So much is being said about banking credit—using it, expanding it, contracting it, etc.—that the average person is likely to be confused as to what banking credit, or any kind of credit, actually means. And as most of us are just average persons, and particularly where financial and economic terms are concerned, it is perhaps well to reduce credit to its simplest and plainest terms, and see what the meaning of it, credit means. No matter at what angle we may view it, it means either immediately or prospectively, an obligation assumed, a debt to be paid. We borrow or buy on credit today and pledge ourselves to pay on some future day. This is true whether the transaction involves a dollar payable within a month or a million dollars payable in a score of years, and it is equally true whether it be an individual, a corporation, a municipality, a province or a nation. The principle is the same, no matter what the circumstance.

Our major difficulties today arise from the fact that there was too much credit, not too little, available to us in the past. It was easy to borrow; it was easy to buy on the deferred payment, or installment plan. Everybody was doing it. The nations of the world fought a great four-year war on credit, destroying cities, shipping, industries, productive human beings, blowing it all away with high explosives, and promising to pay the huge bills incurred at some future time. Farmers bought more land, more implements, combines, tractors, trucks, automobiles, radios, etc., on credit; the workmen and salaried people in the towns and cities bought houses, and furniture, and automobiles, scores of things they regarded as necessities and other scores which were luxuries, on credit. Salesmen urged the people to do these things, telling them their credit was good. And all this credit meant just one thing—it meant debt.

Governments and corporations proceeded on the same basis. Hundreds of millions of borrowed money were expended on railways, high standard highways, public buildings, and modern public services of many kinds. People demanded these things and enjoyed them. Voices raised in warning that a day of reckoning would come were disregarded, and those who gave voice to such warnings were derided as pessimists, people without vision or initiative, hopelessly non-progressive. Credit was available, so why not use it and let the future pay? And every credit used meant a debt contracted.

What was then the future is now the present, and we are called upon to pay. And that's the chief trouble today—we have got to pay, and we don't like it. Nay, more, we have acknowledged the fact that it is now well nigh impossible to pay, because we used more credit, and thus created more debt, than our resources now enable us to pay.

Credit is an expensive thing. It also is an illusive thing, a will-o'-the-wisp to the unwary and thoughtless venturist. But the debt created, and remember debt is always created by credit; you cannot have one without the other, is not illusive; it is a hard, concrete fact. No matter what your credit may be, it is no more, if you are wise, than your capacity to pay the debt which the use of that credit creates.

Present debts cannot safely be disposed of by apparently simple procedure of wiping them out by legislative action, or through the artificial process of inflation. Repudiation would be destructive of future credits which, within reason, are necessary on the part of the world's business, because all credit is merely confidence; destroy confidence by acts of repudiation and you destroy credit. On the other hand, inflation beyond normal, ultimately means deflation back to normal. If the pendulum swings to the extreme right, it will have to swing, just as far to the left before it gradually reaches a normal position. These are laws of nature which no legislation in the world can override.

Nor can present indebtedness be liquidated by more credit, which only means more debt, a transfer of debt from one source to another. Debt once contracted must be honorably and honestly discharged. In some cases, in no doubt a goodly number of cases, adjustments must be made in order to prevent maximum losses by both debtor and creditor, but in the majority of cases debts ought to be paid through frugal living, practical economy, painstaking work. Having enjoyed what credit bought for us, we must now pay for that credit. Because we did not know how to use credit wisely when it was obtainable, we are now realizing what it means to pass through the slow, laborious and generally painful process of paying our debts.

Suffered A Severe Attack Of Dysentery

Mr. F. L. D. Moulton, Vernon, B.C., writes:—
Last summer I suffered from a severe attack of dysentery. I tried nearly everything on the market, without getting any relief, until a friend told me to use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I bought a bottle of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I got immediate relief. Now I am making it a rule to always keep a bottle of it in my medicine chest.

"Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are really for dysentery, colic and diarrhoea, but I always use it for the genuine Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

An Unusual Damage Suit

Belgian Actor Claims $500 For Loss Of Beard

For the loss of his beard, which was shaved off in a fight with a Belgian film actor, M. de Nery, is claiming $500 damages from the State.

The beard, a hirsute growth, was of great commercial as well as aesthetic value. M. de Nery declared because it enabled him to play important parts in which a patriarchal appearance was required.

He bases his claim for compensation on the fact that while awaiting release after completing a sentence for fraud, he was sent by mistake to the penitentiary at Fresnes and subjected to the same regime as criminals who were required to be clean-shaven, instead of remaining simply under detention, as he was entitled.

Money is scarce yet she has pretty clothes

"You always look as if you had just stepped out of fashion show. Your money is none too plentiful with you. How do you do it? Are your clothes made for dark colors. Diamond Tints are for light shades. They need no bolter and they last through repeated launderings. Any you need to do is to tone your skin with Diamond Tints. You can get such lovely shades by using them. So you see," said Mrs. Burnette, "pretty clothes are as easy for you to have as for me."

Here Of The Sudan

One of the last surviving heroes of the British conquest of the Sudan, Sir Rudolph Slatin Pasha, 75, died in a sanatorium at Vienna, Austria. He was an Austrian by birth. When 21 he enlisted in the British army in Egypt. He served under "Chatter" Gordon and with Lord Kitchener as chief of the British Intelligence Service, and subsequently, as the British general, Sir Rudolph Slatin, he governed the Sudan.

Soured ON THE WORLD?—THAT'S LIVER Wake up Your Liver

No Calumet necessary
Many people who feel sour, sluggish and tired, are suffering from a liver that is not working properly. The liver is the largest organ in the body and it is the most important. It filters out the poisons from the blood and it is the source of bile, which is necessary for the digestion of food. If the liver is not working properly, the body will feel sour and sluggish.

There are many ways to keep the liver healthy. One of the best is to eat a diet that is rich in fruits and vegetables. Another is to exercise regularly. And a third is to take a liver tonic.

An Oil Of Merits.—Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil is not a jumble of medicinal substances thrown together and pushed by advertising, but the result of the careful investigation of the healing qualities of certain oils as applied to the human body. It is a rare combination and it won and kept popular favor from the first. A trial of it will carry conviction to any who doubt its power to repair and heal.

Light Metal Invented

A new metal, which has been invented by a British firm, is lighter than aluminum, as strong as cast iron, cheaper than brass, impervious to sea-water, and can be bent while cold. It is already in use by the Admiralty.

Flouted Bad Luck

'When the Thirteen Club of London held its annual luncheon recently, a persistent weather attack came to nought. The members walked under a ladder, opened an umbrella in the room, spilt salt, sat at an oval table facing ladies shoes, and in other ways flouted bad luck.

Persistent Asthma. A most distressing characteristic of this debilitating disease, is the persistence with which recurring attacks come to nag away strength and leave the sufferer in a state of almost continual expectation. No wise precaution can be taken than that of keeping at hand a supply of Dr. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy, famous as the most potent remedy for eradicating the disease from the tender air passages.

Boycott Nippon Goods

Chinese Merchants in Philippines Hit At Japanese Trade

Six hundred Chinese, including many of the leading merchants of the Philippines, at a mass meeting in Manila, voted to declare a boycott on all Japanese goods in the Philippine Islands.

The mass meeting was in observance of Humiliation Day, called on the anniversary of the occupation of Manchuria by the Japanese. A boycott on Japanese goods has been little discussed publicly by the Chinese merchants, who control three-quarters of the Philippine retail trade.

NURSE LOSES 7 LBS.

"I weighed 145 lbs.," writes a nurse, "when I bought the bottle of Kruschen Salts which I have just finished. I have taken a good half-ounce in a glass of hot water three times a day. Now I weigh 138 lbs. I am very glad to have lost weight, especially without trouble."—M.H.P. (Trained Nurse).

Unlike most salts, Kruschen's is not a laxative. When you take Kruschen Salts you not only stimulate your liver and kidneys to function naturally, but you also supply every internal organ, gland, nerve and fibre in the body with Nature's own revitalizing and rejuvenating minerals.

Get a bottle of Kruschen Salts, and take one-half a teaspoon in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast.

Before the bottle is empty you'll feel younger—eyes will brighten—skin grow brighter—nerves steady—your sleep sound, enjoy your meals, and a hard day's work you'll be ready for wholesome recreation—one million women already know all this.

One Way To Combat Problem Of Soil Drifting

"Soil drifting is a very serious problem in many parts of Canada, and many are the ways that have been tried to combat it. Here is a new one, and one which looks fairly promising. Spread strata of fresh manure about three rods apart. Then drive the spreader the other way across the field, so as to make checkerboard pattern. Not only does this keep the soil at home, but it catches the neighbor's soil."

A Continent At War

South American Countries Fight While
Governors Discusses World Peace

It is an ironic commentary upon the campaign for disarmament that at the very time when their representatives are at Geneva discussing plans to establish world-peace, the majority of the republics of South America are busily engaged in actual warfare. Argentina and Uruguay arrived at a peaceful compromise over their differences a short time ago. Colombia enjoys a period of relief from strife. Venezuela is under the iron hand of an adroit and alert dictator, and presents an outward aspect of peace. But apart from these four, every republic on the South American Continent is either engaged in bitter fighting or has just begun a breathing-spell from conflict.

Nor is Colombia likely to remain quiescent long, for her only port on the Amazon was recently seized by Peruvian bandits, and the Peruvian Government has just emerged from a fierce struggle with Communists and is feeling warlike.

And in Brazil the most serious of all the civil wars is raging between the wealthy state of Sao Paulo and the Federal Government. Brazil is no stranger to civil war, but this conflict is more bitter than any that have preceded it in recent years, and the people of Sao Paulo are fighting with a fierce determination and an enthusiasm that is giving the Federal authorities grave cause for concern.

They are making their own arms and ammunition; they are holding all the important strategic posts successfully against the Federal troops.

The causes of this blaze of armed conflict are various, but nearly all of them can be traced directly back to economic factors that have either been caused by, or aggravated by, the world-depression. It should be borne in mind, however, that military coups d'etat in South America are not so serious, as a rule, as those in European countries, since the people of the South American countries have developed a habit of dismissing a Government by such methods, when it has proved unsatisfactory. None the less, the credits throughout the continent generally are being impaired by these civil conflicts, and long as they continue they constitute a serious handicap to the rehabilitation of the financial status of the countries involved.

Mechanical Progress

New Inventions Have Not Always
Proven To Be Unlimited Blessings

Gone is the old questioning of the scientists of the Victorian age, who assumed as a matter of course that every triumph of mind over matter, every new harnessing of the forces of nature to the will of mankind, would be an unqualified boon, and that all movement must be progress to a better and a happier state. The reflective scientist of today is not so sure. Ultimately, and in the long run perhaps, there must be benefit. But he cannot shut his eyes to the fact that while the mechanical sciences have added enormously to the pageantry and variety of modern life, they have produced by no means unlimited blessings. Industrialism's glaring sins of omission and commission; the perversion of science to the perfecting of instruments of destruction; the terrible ruthlessness of revolving wheels; the smashing effect which a single new invention may have upon the lives and homes of thousands—these have to be remembered when we worship mechanical progress.—London Daily Telegraph.

Herriot Describes War As Collective Crime

French Premier Says His Country
Desires Security For Nations

France is anxious to create a regime of security in Europe, guaranteeing all nations, including Germany, complete tranquility, Premier Herriot said in the course of a recent address.

Affirming that his Government's primary object is to maintain peace, Herriot described war as "a collective crime."

"It is astonishing," he said, "that morals and justice are so severe regarding homicide, and are so negligent toward political leaders guilty of causing the massacre of entire peoples."

Herriot replied the British memorandum replying to Germany's demand for arms equality, declaring that "we gladly notice that justice are so severe regarding homicide, and are so negligent toward political leaders guilty of causing the massacre of entire peoples."

The fact that stamps cost three cents instead of two doesn't seem to deter any of our creditors from sending along the monthly dues.

Wills That Make Trouble

One Can Complicate Matters As Effectively As a Bomb

Mention was made in a recent lawsuit arising out of a will of the fact that the testator had made nine last wills and testaments.

This seems a fairly large number, but it is by no means a record. One woman made a dozen wills within a few years, and on the death of a former Duke of Sutherland it was found that he had left no fewer than ninety-two wills behind him.

But if the man who makes a number of different wills may complicate matters for the beneficiaries, the man who makes only one can sometimes do so just as effectively.

In one case a wealthy man was in the habit of lending copies of an elaborately kept diary for the year annually to four of his friends. They soon got bored and stopped reading them. But one of them discovered by accident, some years after the diarist's death, that he had written his will on page 647 of one of the annual volumes. In it he bequeathed his entire fortune to the four friends.

Meanwhile, the estate had passed to a distant relative, and it was only after a long lawsuit that the four legacies were able to recover what was left of it.

Holds Record As Linguist

Dr. C. H. Irwin Conversant With Every Living and Dead Language

The most agile tongue in the world belongs to Dr. C. H. Irwin, who is retiring from the post of editor and general secretary of the Religious Tract Society. He can speak and read more languages than any other living man. French, Spanish, Italian, Portuguese, Hungarian, Dutch, Russian and German come to him almost as easily as English. In addition to this, he has edited the Gospel in nine different languages, including Finnish, Serbian, Polish, Czech, Hungarian and modern Greek. These are living languages; but he is thoroughly conversant with dead languages such as Latin, Greek and Hebrew.

Nor are his linguistic attainments confined to Europe and the Near East. He knows enough of many native African tongues to be able to correct proofs or translations of the Bible. As general secretary of the Religious Tract Society he has had to correspond during his thirty-five years' service with people in most parts of the world, and seldom has he been floored by a letter written in even the most out-of-the-way language. Most of us who know only English have but 5,000 or 6,000 words at our command. Dr. Irwin is master of at least 4,000,000 words.

Planes Link Trappers With Trading Posts

Hudson's Bay Company Arrange
Service To Care For Lonely
Men

The Hudson's Bay Company, one of the oldest of trading companies, is taking steps to keep some of the world's loneliest men in touch with civilization. Its trappers spend the winter in the far-away Arctic regions, many of them three or four weeks' journey from the nearest post at which supplies can be obtained.

Now an aeroplane service has been instituted to care for these lonely men. In the past they have come into contact with civilization only once a year during their annual visits to the company's trading posts, and supplies have been taken to them during the summer by trading ships. Now they will be within three days' journey of the great cities of Canada. From each, the 800 horsepower planes will set out, bearing mails and newspapers, food and clothing. Each aeroplane can carry three tons.

The machines are fitted with skis which enable them to land on snow or ice. Besides taking goods to the trappers they will bring back furs.

Remedy For Diabetes Explained To Doctors

Treatment With Insulin Can Be Given
Through the Nose

The new treatment for diabetes recently explained to the International Physiological Congress in Rome was developed at the Israel-Zion Hospital in Brooklyn, it has just been revealed.

Dr. William S. Collins who developed the treatment and explained it to physicians from all parts of the world assembled in Rome for the conference, is chief of the Israel-Zion Diabetic Clinic.

The old method of giving diabetes sufferers injections of insulin from a hypodermic needle has long been considered unsatisfactory by many physicians because of the tendency of the wound caused by the needle to become infected. Insulin taken through the mouth lessens its potency in the stomach.

Through Dr. Collins' experiments in Brooklyn, it was found possible to give insulin through the nose. When this method was first tried doctors said it was found that the insulin would not penetrate the mucous membranes of the nose. Dr. Collins said after repeated experiments in mixing the insulin with other chemicals which made the lining permeable.

Fence Built To Stop Locusts

Goverment of Buenos Aires Starts
Its Annual Fight

Providing for its annual war against locusts as summer approaches, the Government announced that by November it would have 7,000 miles of galvanized iron barriers and 6,200 miles of zinc fencing against the Chaco frontier.

Put together with 9,400,000 rivets, the fencing stops the hoppers before they reach the jumping age.

The pests crawl out of the Chaco swamp, halt at the barriers, are raked up and burned.

Amphibians, 1900 Years Old, Rescued
From Wall in Greece

A Pennsylvania toad that survived 33 years in a cannibal is only a runner-up, William Alexander Campbell, professor of art and archaeology at Wellesley College, has revealed.

Professor Campbell said he was supervising the excavation of a Greek house in Corinth, Greece, this summer, which according to coins found on the site must have been erected about the first century, A.D.

Suddenly two Greek toads hopped out of a hole just made by a pickaxe in the hands of a workman. The 1900-year-old toad, leaping amphibians, shuddered, blinked and hopped off among the ruins, Professor Campbell said.

Another Hunger Striker

Descendant Of "King Tut" To Starve
Until Valuable Relics Released

A descendant of the Egyptian King Tut-ank-Amen, who for years has claimed the Tut-ank-Amen treasures from the Egyptian Government, has decided to emulate the example of Mahatma Gandhi, in India, and begin a hunger strike for the possession of the valuable relics.

In a letter to the newspapers, the descendants of the Egyptian Pharaohs says he intended to proceed to the historic temple of Edfu on October 11, the date on which Tut-ank-Amen died thirty centuries ago. There he will hold to his fast until death unless the authorities hand over the golden treasures.

USUS SOLUS

What Really Matters

Not so many years ago, in this western country, it was considered effeminate for anyone to make a public avowal of the benefits of religion. But times change. Not merely satisfied with taking an interest in the affairs of the church, many business men today are making clearcut statements that the need of the world is more of the Christian spirit.

Several days ago Mr. V. C. Irons, director of McConnel & Ferguson, Ltd., one of the largest advertising agencies on this continent, made the following remarks to the Advertising and Sales Bureau of the Vancouver Board of Trade:

"Has it ever occurred to us that the depression might not be due to economic or financial reasons? In the ultimate analysis, everything depends on the individual and the way his life is ordered. We should take as much interest in God as did our ancestors, and return to the old religion where the Creator takes an important part in our lives. If we would do this, the country would soon be on its feet and would be the envy of the rest of the world."

Mr. Irons, like scores of other big business leaders throughout the country, is not too big to realize that there is more to this business of living than dollars and cents.—E.X.

Drink Water

Most people, without much effort, can secure all the water they require for drinking. Nevertheless, many persons suffer from a lack of the full measure of the health they could enjoy because they fail to use plenty of water. We cannot enjoy good health if we deprive ourselves of the water which they need. Water is an essential part of every tissue of the body. The blood is mostly water, and even such hard tissues as the teeth and the bones contain water.

Without sufficient water the body functions become disturbed. There may be headaches, the digestive system may be upset, or symptoms of faulty functioning may appear. We can live for many days without food; life can continue only a few days without water.

The regular daily use of plenty of water is necessary, to replace the water which our bodies lose each day we live. Water is lost in every breath. Breathe on a cold glass and you will see, collected on the glass, the droplets of water which are contained in the breath.

The skin gets rid of a large amount of water in the form of perspiration. This is obvious in summer. It goes on, to a lesser degree, in cold weather when—because it is not noticeable—it is called "insensible" perspiration.

Quantities of water are passed from the kidneys and in the movements of the bowels. All told, we lose on an average about five pints of water daily through the various channels mentioned. We must take into our bodies an amount of water at least equal to what we lose if we are to keep our bodies healthy.

Many people used to go to some mineral springs when they felt "below par." The benefits received from their stay at the springs were due in large measure to the increased quantities of water they drank.

Much of the water we require is taken into our bodies in our foods, many of which contain a large percentage of water. Green vegetables and fruit contain much water; about 78% of milk is water.

Moderate amounts of fluids with meals is desirable, provided they are not used to take the place of thorough chewing of the food. The time to drink at meals is when the mouth is empty and never to wash down food.

A glass or two of water upon rising in the morning, and between meals, together with the moderate use of fluids at meals will assure the regular daily use of plenty of water which is essential to good health.

We Are Coming, Father Abraham

Since broaching the subject of a little gravel for our streets, there have been several hats thrown into the ring! The Village Councilors are unanimously behind the work, the use of a caterpillar tractor has been offered to level the streets, and as soon as the weather will permit the completion of the work, we should have no trouble to get this much-desired improvement, if all the hats of the citizens are thrown into the ring.

We take pleasure in inducing Mr. Les Philpott to you, who will meet you and wait upon your wants when you call on us. Les, as he wants you to call him, will be glad to meet you.
